A kitchen without a gas range can blot out the blue of summer skies with its heat and druggery. Estate ranges bake with fresh air, their scientifically constructed ventilated ovens insure perfect heat regulations, the key to faultless baking. A short cabinet of superior design including large hot-closet is an efficiency stove in every particular, a "kitchenette" compact yet complete, and those sturdy 3 burner cookers are in our show-room ready for inspection. It's a wise plan to install a gas range before the scorching weather comes, avoiding disappointment and possible scolding, as Franklin put it "BE ON TIME."

REMOVING OLD BREED ELM

Washington Square Landmark Must Go—In Weak and Dangerous Condition—To Be Replaced by Maple Planted in the Enclosure.

In such a weakened condition as to be dangerous, the old Breed elm, a landmark on Washington square for generations, must come down, and on Tuesday, under the direction of Tree Warden E. C. Littlebridge, and with Henry E. Davis in charge, the work of taking it down was begun. It is all to be removed, and it is expected that the tree will be planted in its place in the little triangular plot where this so-called Breed elm has stood for so many years.

In its best days, the old tree had a magnificent spread and was a prized ornament in this spot. At different times when its removal was advocated for one reason or another, different citizens have taken the tree as their guardian, and raising a vigorous protest succeeded in having the sentence of death against the old elm commuted. Since the ravages of the elm tree beetle in recent years, the stately old tree has gradually lost its beauty and at times has become something of a nuisance through the fact that pigeons roosted in it. At one time ex-Mayor Thayer brought the old elm into prominence by giving it the sobriquet of "the public pigeon roost."

Although the tree now stands in the middle of Washington square, it originally stood in the yard of Mayor Breed, who lived in the house owned by the late Mayor Calvin L. Harwood on Washington square. It was in the Breed yard up to 1870, but during the mayoralty of the late James Lloyd Crockett, the fence was taken down and the tree was moved to its present location. This made the tree the central object of Washington square.

It is now in a weakened condition, and the street is now in fine condition. The roadbed on the east side of the car track was repaired first.

AUTO ADVICE

Given to Business Men's Association by Corporation Counsel.

In the reported advice given by Corporation Counsel J. T. Fanning to the Norwich Business Men's association he was wrongly quoted upon some points relating to auto speed laws.

He read the latest state law to them of which the first section is as follows:

No person shall operate a motor vehicle on the public highways of this state recklessly or at a rate of speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the width, traffic and use of the highway, or so as to endanger the property or the life or limb of any person.

He told the business men that no city could pass an ordinance that would conflict with it and he read the section which states that it is prima facie evidence that the speed is reckless and dangerous if it exceeds the rate of 25 miles an hour for an eighth of a mile, and that the speed shall not exceed three miles an hour in city limits, but not in city limits, where the speed must not exceed ten miles an hour, if the road is obstructed or the view blocked or in other cases.
